

An Account of the Cruise of the St. George: On the North American and West Indian Station; During the Years 1861-1862 (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from An Account of the Cruise of the St. George: On the North American and West Indian Station; During the Years 1861-1862

The following pages consist mainly of extracts from a private journal kept by me during the cruise of Her Majesty's Ship St. George, on the North American and West Indian station. Some apology seems due for thus venturing to bring them before the public, but as its estimation of them will be but little affected by any I can offer, I will not undertake to excuse either the fact of its publication, or the many faults and shortcomings which it doubtless contains. On one or two subjects I would, however, offer a remark. It will be easily understood that it is extremely difficult, in a work of this description, to avoid a frequent use of the first personal pronoun; and a knowledge of this will, I trust, save me from the imputation of egotism, on account of the number of times the phrase I did or saw this or that, occurs.
