Excerpt from Cobbetts Political Register, Vol. 71: From January to March, 1831; Both Months Inclusive Now, how are they to dothese things, or, indeed, any part of these things, unless they be at the places where they have so solemnly promised to do them? How are they to promote Gods glory and edify his people; how are they to instruct the people committed to their charge; how are they to explain the word to the people of their cure how are they to be ready with faithful dili gence to banish and drive away all er roucous and strange doctrine contrary to Gods word, and especially from a mongst them that are committed to their charge: how are they to fulfil any of these solemn promises, if they absent themselves from the very spot where the people committed to their charge reside? And if, having already one living, they grasp at another or two, how do they obey the injunction of the Apostle, to avoid filthy lucre; how do they obey Christ, who bids them freely give how do they fulfil their own pro mise, made at the altar and with such awful solemnity, to lay aside the study of the world; and how do they show themselves followers of the Apostle, who bids them be subject one to another, and be clothed with humility.
