The four books are as follows: Book 1. Computer-Internet Education-Resource Guide Book 2. Internet Research-Freeware-Software Guide Book 3. Create a Website & Digital Video Guide Book 4. Computer Games Guide This is a basic, all-around computer-internet education-resource guide. I tell you where to go to learn more. Its not heavy on tedious, specific technical details. If you want that, just go to your local library or to online computer bookstores. Computer instruction books are at #002-006 at the library, internet website books at #025.04 or HQ755, QA76.5 and TK5105. You could go to your local library, both the stacks and the reference section and see some of the neat computer books they have there. You can also look at computer magazines. The internet continues to evolve but its still pretty basic. The basic tools have been created for now. The next quantum leap remains to be seen. The search engine has not changed much since the early days. The internet is basically a tool to move text, pictures and video around. The basic tools are: search engine email create your own website do a blog chat video chat telephone join social community websites send tweets download pictures, video watch TV listen to audio, radio Try 004.00-.70, #303.483 or HM221, QA76.76 or TK5105-TK7887 at the library for books about learning to use the internet. Book 2 is basically about six things: learn how to use the internet for research and finding information and knowledge a big list of most search engines and search websites worldwide a big list of the most popular high-traffic websites a big list of software for sale a big list of free software or freeware including most administrative/ managerial software like openoffice, gimp, mind-mapping software, etc. jobs with search engine companies, website companies, webmaster jobs and jobs with freeware and software companies. Its all about the internet and software. You can use this information to find many companies in the internet-software realm. Volume four is made up of four chapters about jobs in the internet-software field. Create a Website Introduction I think the easiest way to set up a website is to go to weebly. I think theyre as simple as it gets to create a pretty good website, all free. You can buy a website name called a domain and superimpose it over the free name you get from them. Other big free ones are wordpress, blogspot and typepad. There are books on website design at #000 to #005 at the library. If you want to learn the hard way, read this book then study html code. I tried wix.com but they seem to have limits on space usage and stuff like that. Even though the following information was written for business websites, it can apply to any type of website. If youre starting, you can get free website hosting service, do a free blog on a blog website or do a website on myspace.com or facebook.com. This book pretty well has it all about creating a website going from the lazy novice who simply has facebook page or uses weebly to the person who wants to start from scratch using html, xml, java and all that stuff. There are a lot of video alternatives besides youtube which I talk about in this book but youtube has the free online courses for anyone who wants to start a youtube channel, create videos, edit them and polish them for public consumption. Its all there to get started then if you can make professional style videos and find a way to market them, you can move on to film festivals, film distribution companies, etc. which I talk about in my movie-making job book. Volume 1. Set Up A Website Basics Chapter 1. Set Up A Website Info Create a Website 1 A good website is all about communicating something unique, helpful, inspirational and interesting. Start with a basic design. Break the site up into small units for quick and easy navigation like chapters in a book with an e
