

Whos Who 2010

Whos Who is the essential register of information about the people who matter in public life today, in Britain and in key roles elsewhere. Published annually in print since 1849 by A & C Black, it is the first and most famous reference work of its kind. Since 2008, Whos Who has been published by Oxford University Press for the first time in a dedicated online edition which enables readers to make the most of its rich biographical information. In its new form Whos Who is also updated regularly throughout the year. Whos Who gives current vital information about more than 32,000 people, detailing birthdays, families, education, career, publications and creative works, personal interests, clubs, and addresses. Being selected for inclusion in Whos Who is seen as a unique mark of distinction in Britain, and the information is truly authoritative: gathered from the individuals themselves, from the Prime Minister down, it is carefully checked and standardized by the editors of Whos Who at A & C Black. Whos Who is therefore the essential reference point for people in government, business, professional and cultural institutions, education, and charities, as well as a fascinating reflection of wider society for a general readership. While Whos Who profiles the living, Who Was Who collects together the entries of more than 100,000 people who were included in the register but have died since 1897. Together they provide an unparalleled collection of autobiographical records which complement and extend Oxfords collections of lively and authoritative biographies in the Oxford Dictionary of National Biography, Oxford Reference Online, and the Grove dictionaries of Art and Music. This print and online set, available exclusively from OUP, offers the best of both worlds: a permanent record in the form of the famous annual red volume (edited and published by A & C Black), and personal single-user access for 12 months to the OUP online service that includes both Whos Who and Who Was Who.
