Not illustrated. 1896 Excerpt: ...of Texas, to the Pottsville Conglomerate series, the Lower Productive Coal Measures, and part of the Lower Barren Coal Measures of Pennsylvania. The series corresponds in the main to the Middle Carboniferous limestone of eastern Russia. The Upper Coal Measures. The Arkansas Upper Coal Measures correspond to the upper part of the Canyon and the whole of the Cisco division of Texas, and below the transitional Permo-Carboniferous or Artinsk stage, to which latter age the lower part of the Wichita and Albany divisions of Texas belong. The Lower Permo-Carboniferous beds of Kansas and Nebraska are also probably to be correlated with the Artinsk stage, although Waagenf classes the entire series with the ammonite-bearing beds of northern Texas, described by Dr. C. A. White, in Bulletin 77 of the U. S. Geological Survey. Most of the latter Texas beds belong rather above the Artinsk stage, and in the true Permian, and are probably of the same age as the Middle and Upper Productus Limestone of the Salt Range. Waagen, in Salt Range Fossils, Geological Results, p. 2:18. gives a comparative table, showing the relationship of the upper Paleozoic strata all over the world. While the position assigned some of the American deposits does not agree with that accepted by most American geologists, still the table is very useful for comparison, and it has been freely used in compiling the comparative table accompanying this paper. The writer, in Journal Geology, Vol. ii, p. 191. following Karpinsky, placed the Popanoceras parkeri beds in the lower Permian or Artinsk, but in this he was mistaken. Prof. W. F. Cummins told the writer that these beds are not in the upper Cisco, but in the Strawn division, and therefore are Lower Coal Measures. t Karpinsky, Ammomen der Artinsk-Stit...
