

The Key

There is a saying the man in the desert with the knowledge of where the water is, is morally bound to share such information. Today it is a sad state, that our society has come to be, when our medically trained, oath abiding practitioners, turn a blind eye to treatments and cures for debilitating diseases such as blindness, autism, cerebral palsy and others, in an effort to continue to capitalize on treatments and drugs, that do not work, but keep the patient in a less than desirable state, for profit only. This book brings to light a very obvious set of circumstances known and tossed aside by, not only the ophthalmological community, but the neurology and medical community too. Although legally blind, author Linda Lueck, shares her life-altering experiences that enabled her to obtain a drivers license. Participating in the innovating therapeutic concepts, conducted by pioneering practitioner, Dr. Albert A. Sutton, she discovers she is not his only success story. Lueck interviews the doctor in the book, documenting dialogue that exposes cures, utilizing successful neurological treatments known since the 1950s, but not openly acknowledged or practiced. Their discussion explores proven, documented cases, incorporating Suttons concept of whole mind/body and neurological development therapy, for such well-known disabilities as Strabismus, blindness, Cerebral Palsy, Autism and numerous variations of mental challenges. Luecks book poses the question, With this knowledge, in modern medicine today, why are failing, archaic treatments still being prescribed, instead of documented, proven, cures and therapies?
