

Pack Your Seabag

This is the first of a series of short stories that intertwine about a boy who at 10 years old in the early 60s; took most of his summer vacations from school working with his father on his open ocean fishing vessel. He held the positions of cabin boy, cooks helper, deck ape, mate, and ultimately Captain under his fathers grooming. It was a Captaincy of agreement, and still is upon occasion. These stories are mainly Father and son, and those who have been mentors to me. I do not consider myself a writer, but I am a Story teller of sorts. This is my attempt to put it on paper so to speak in this new world of digital advancement. The people, places, and events that are true as was seen through my eyes. I am sure others involved in the same would see things a bit different and have a different story to tell, but these are what I experienced. I use words, expressions, and slang of the times and make no apologies, if I did not, it would take away from the value of the writings. I hope you enjoy them and feel them worth the leisure time that it takes to read. Truly, Captain JW Gooding
